

Press Release*12 May 2010*For Immediate Release in United Kingdom only*BRITS STRUGGLING TO SAVE POST-RECESSION

Whilst higher earners in the South of the UK take home an average of £1,665* per month, the average adult has only £131 a week to live on after outgoings are deducted. Adults in the North of the UK earn a monthly average of £1474, and only have £110 to live on per week after outgoings – as living costs increase across the country and the North/South divide begins to blur, ICICI Bank UK Plc reports that more than two in five adults (44%) do not expect to have any money to save in the next month.

At a time when Britain is reported to be slowly emerging from recession, ICICI Bank research is the first to track the true financial health of British adults on a city by city basis across the UK. ICICI Bank interviewed more than 2,000 adults across 15 UK cities, asking them about their spending and savings habits for the month ahead.

Edinburgh has the least amount of debt to pay on a monthly basis - £115

Amount spent on everyday social and luxury items:

Those in Bristol splash out more on luxuries than anywhere else in Britain - £209 compared to a national average of £175

People in Birmingham are most frugal when it comes to luxury living – spending £281 per person per month

Saving and investing:

Lowest savers are in Southampton - £56 per person per month

New borrowing:

Best at not borrowing is Bristol – £21 average per month

Amount in a savings or deposit account:

Highest total savings are in London - £13,624.74

Lowest total savings are in Edinburgh - £7,373.90

Anubrata Biswas, Head of Retail Banking for HiSAVE comments: “It is essential that people in Britain continue to prioritise savings, rather than borrowing, as the path for a sound economic future. Our index clearly shows, city by city, that Britons are taking positive action to clear debt and save more, but by moving from a standard savings account to a fixed rate savings account, they could be earning much more interest, freeing up more of their earnings and start planning for a brighter future.”
